Class Poem

Toward Our Future

Our future looms before us
From high school days we part,
We only wish to leave these words
Before life's chores we start.

To God we are thankful
For strong bodies and minds,
And a chance to gain knowledge
So a better life we can find.

To our parents we are grateful
For time and effort spent,
In loving guidance helping us
To accomplish as we went.

Our teachers we are thanking
For giving help, thoughts and praise,
For fun we've had and knowledge gained
Throughtout our high school days.

Dear friends we shall remember
And many others, too,
Who have done many little things
That helped to see us through.

We cannot count the memories
Or occasions we recall,
But they have made school days
Exciting and gay for all.

Now as a class we are leaving
To start down the road
Called "The Future", where we know
Our dreams and plans are stowed.

Class Prophecy

In 1964, I acquired a job as drummer with Kieth Kreft's well known band. Its motto was "the crafty music of Kreft". We were to start a road tour through the United States and Mars, and the band's first stop was Lytton, Iowa. Of course, Lytton brought back many fond memories, for in 1954, we graduated from the high school here.

We decided to see if any old classmates were living in their old home town and went to a farm a few miles south of Lytton to visit Darwin Matter, who, we had heard was living here. We were sure we had made some mistake because the directions took us to a huge diary farm with very white buildings. But soon we noticed Darwin walking toward us and decided it was no mistake after all. We were quite curious and he said that he owned a chain of diary farms--some even on Mars. Also he told us that all this had been accomplished because he had stayed single. Naturally, Kieth agreed that that definitely was the road to success. We wanted to stay longer, but Kieth didn't want to be late for his first engagement in the Lytton Stork Club.

The next day we decided to do more sightseeing. As we walked along the street we came to a huge skyscraper office building. We noticed the name "Mayo and Mayo, Inc., Trucking Firm", on the sign in front. Our curiosity was aroused, so we walked in and asked if we could see Mr. Mayo. We waited and waited and finally were ushered into "Mr. Mayo, President's" office. And, just as we suspected, there sat Sharon Mayo behind a huge desk with a cigar in his mouth. He told us about his business. He said he had lost count of the trucks he owned, and he owned some rocket trucks for trips to Mars and back, but "this was relitively a new field and quite undeveloped yet". We were about to leave when Kieth asked him what the other Mayo stood for on the sign. He laughed and said it stood for his wife, Doris, who was vice-president.

Our next stop was Odebolt, Iowa. Just before we reached Odebolt, the band bus had a flat tire. We walked to a farmhouse nearby to call a filling station. And there we saw the former Mary Lou Everts, now McKinney. We talked about old times and in the meantime tried to count the children. She also told us that as a sideline and a hobby she and Glenn sold Mercury helicopters. Before we left we bought one for the rest of the road tour, being convinced that they were much faster.

After completeing our engagement in Odebolt we traveled on to Ames. Here we saw Erma Dee Landsness. She said that she had been conducting research here. She told us that she was a professor here, had married a professor, appeared on the radio and TV once in a while and had just developed a business man's lunch. It consisted of three pills--one for the appetizer, one for the main course and one for dessert. She said this was designed especially for busy people who didn't want to take time out to eat. Kieth and I decided that we would never be too busy to eat.

Our next stop was Fort Riley, Kansas to complete an engagement for the servicemen there. While here, we saw Vernon Batz and asked him what he was doing here. He pointed to his stripes and said he was a sergeant. He told us that his job was to break in the new recruits. "Break 'em in the Batz way" was the motto of the camp. Vernon had been offered many opportunities for advancement but had refused them all because he liked his work so well.

We left Fort Riley and traveled to Washington, D. C. Naturally, while here we wanted to shake hands with the President, so first we decided to see a congressman and have a little influence behind us. Verne Hillmer surprised us very much when we were taken to a congressman's office. We asked him what he was doing here. He quite disgustedly answered that he was a Democratic congressman. We were quite embarressed and hastily apologized. He told us that we might like to see the man that he was working with on a committee right now. We agreed and he took us to the Secretary of Agriculture's office. We waited a while and soon a prosperous looking man bustled through the door. It was none other than Harlan Schade. After discussing the farm situation a while, he invited us over to his mansion for dinner, apologizing that the servants were gone, but his wife would get dinner. We wanted to see his wife, but we had to leave.

The next day we landed in New York. During our show a bundle of diamonds and furs asked us to lunch at her pentlouse after wards. We asked her name and address. She said she was the former Wilma Jones. No! We had hardly recognized her. She told us that after graduating from Commercial Extension at Omaha, she went to New York and found a job with a Wall Street broker. She got so tired of handling such large numbers that she married him. Now she was living in a luxurious penthouse and that the she owned five cadillacs (of different colors) and a few helicopters and a rocket ship for trips to Mars.

We boarded a rocket ship to Mars to complete our engagements there. The next day we met Goldie Gress. She told us she had married the president of the Interplanatary Telephone Company. She told us that these interplanatary telephone systems were much more complicated to operate than the old-fashioned earth ones. She took us to a little place on the "Milky Way of Mars" for something to eat. Through the smoke and the haze of the little walk-down restuarant we noticed the piano player. Could it be? But it must be! We waked over to see; and yes, it was Gloria Denise. Naturally, we wondered what on earth she was doing in a place like this! We had always thought that she would work with children. Or weren't there children on Mars? She told us that she had just taken this job to study the parents of the little monsters which she worked with during the daytime. She said that studying the parents helped her understand a child's development more.

The next afternoon we went to a basketball game in the Mars Round Garden. The "Mars Bars" were playing the "Interplanatary Rockets". On the program we were quite surprised to see Dale Scharn's name. We watched his spectacular playing and the "Interplanatary Rockets" won due to his able and professional playing. We wanted to talk to him, but we only had time to congratulate him on his way to the lockers after the game.

Once again we were on earth. This time we were in Hollywood, California. Here we met Kenny Staton, the owner of a night club, "Kenny's Place". He invited us to attend a show upstairs that night. He told us that this really was a good way to get rich fast, especially when you had such attractions as Marilyn Monroe. We watched the show when who to our "wondering eyes did appear" but Eleanor Waggett as chief can-can dancer of all can-can daneers. We wanted to talk to her, but she was so busy after the show that we got most of our information from Kenny. He told us that of course she did other kinds of dancing, but was most famous for this. Also, she wasn't married yet, but she had had so many proposals from kings, dukes, movie actors, and other "big wheels" that she was having a hard time deciding. Since we couldn't see Eleanor, Kenny asked us if we might like to see the bouncer. Heavens! We wondered, we hadn't done anything offending, had we? He left and came back with the bouncer. It was Dale Hutchinson. Dale was disappointed because he had hoped it would be someone to bounce. He told us it was quite boring tonight. He said that Kenny paid him by the number of rowdy customers he threw out every night. He liked his job, but he had one complaint. He had broken seven pairs of glasses in two weeks while he had been working on the job!

Again we were on our way, this time to Monte Carlo. We passed by a gambling house and having a few extra dollars, we decided to try our luck. We noticed a big fellow at one card table seeming to be winning quite a lot, judging from the pile of chips in front of him. To our surprise it was none other than Don Bartels engaged in a game of pitch. Don said his experience in this field in his high school days was really paying off for him. We decided that there was too much competition for us and left.

Our next stop was Butte, Montana. In the town, all over we saw signs saying, "Eat at Yeazel's", "Buy your clothes at the Yeazel shop", or "Yeazel Theatre", and others. Finally, we located Mr. Yeazel to learn the secret of his success. He turned out to be our old classmate, Jerry. He said that really there just wasn't a secret. "Either you have it or you don't". He told us he owned a few thousand head of cattle and judging from the looks of his car, we decided he was doing nicely. The car wasn't a Cadillad, or a Lincoln, but a Ford coupe covered with gold, with platinum upholstry. Jerry told us that he just didn't have the heart to trade it off, so he kept it and decorated it up "just a little."

Our next stop was Indianopolis, Indiana. While there we visited the Indianapolis Speedway. We were very surprised to hear the announcer say "Mary Yeazel, the only woman racer in the world, known on mars, to have ever set such spectacular speed records." After the race we went to talk to her.

She told us that there was nothing difficult about her job, and since there weren't anymore honors for her to win she really didn't know just what she would do. We wished her luck and hurried on.

In Chicago, we went to church on Sunday. We kept looking over the minister. He certainly looked familiar. When he ascended to the pulpit we suddenly recognized him. It was Bob Bartels! After the service we went to see him. He told us that he had first become interested in the ministry while attending Wartburg. He had taken this job in Chicago because he felt that "here especially, people had to be shown the right path to follow".

While passing through Cedar Rapids we stopped to look over a newly constructed hospital. We went to the head nurse's office to ask if we could look the hospital over. Behind the desk we could hardly see Marilyn Batz. She told us that her husband and she were joint owners of the hospital. We wanted to meet her husband, but he was in the operating room and quite busy so we left.

While passing through Iowa City we had a slight accident and a few band members were taken to the University hospital. There in a white jacket guess whom we saw. It was Freddie Schwartz. We asked him how he had ever gotten into this profession. He told us he had gone to the State University (we knew why) and had just drifted into this work. He also said that it was quite interesting work, especially the lab technicians. By the way, he had married a lab technician. We congratulated him and wished him much happiness and were on our way again.

Once more we were back in Lytton. There was only one classmate we hadn't seen yet. We finally found her as a kindergarten teacher in Lytton grade school. Strangely enough Janice Longman hadn't married yet. She told us that the right superintendent just hadn't come along yet. We assured her that she was still plenty young and someday she would meet her superintendent charming.

Class History

HOMECOMING

On the afternoon of October first, the scene in Lytton high school was one of confusion. Everyone was busily putting the finishing touches on something for homecoming 1953. They had to hurry because the opening activity of homecoming, the pep rally, was to be that very night.

The pep rally in the gym included several yells and songs and skits given by each class. The junior class received first prize for its skit, and the senior class received second prize. Then there was the traditional snake dance which ended on the main corner of downtown Lytton, where a dummy representing Galva was burned in a large bon-fire. There were more yells and a short talk by Mick Lott, a 1953 graduate of Lytton.

The activities were over until the next day, October second, which was the day of homecoming.

First on the list in the morning was a homecoming parade. The junior high and high school classes, the faculty and some of the organizations in the school made floats. These floats were judged and the sophomore float was awarded first prize. The senior class received second prize.

The homecoming football game in the afternoon was very exciting. It seemed as if Lytton would triumph until in the last few minutes when Galva tied the score. The final score was six to six.

At the half of the game the 1953 homecoming queen was crowned. The honored girl was Janice Longman. Her attendents were Kay Hostetter and Judy Kreft.

As the finishing touch to homecoming, there was a homecoming dance held in the gym. Music was provided by records and by Roger Volker of Ames who played the organ. Miss Annamae Koole played a piano solo and Sharon Mayo presented a dance called "Ballin' the Jack" for the program.

As always, the homecoming activities were enjoyed immensely by the students who presented them. It is hoped that the alumni of Lytton high school enjoyed them as much.

Magazine sales were goosted on two consecutive days by prize money sponsored by the council.

Homecoming-Community Day was sponsored by the student council and the town for the first time. It was held on October second and was quite successful. A parade of floats and other activities took up the morning hours. In the afternoon Lytton Played Galva in a tied game. A dance was held in the gym at hight and also in the legion building.

The council aided the football boys in paying for thier insurance. It paid $2.50 out of the $6.50 for each policy.

The council approved plans for getting the girls' basketball team new knee-guards and for purchasing new suits for the boys. The boys' team was very proud of its new fold uniforms.

On Saturday, October fourth the marching band went to Sioux City to march. The council agree to help pay for a part of each member's evening meal.

All the members of the council attended the IASC convention at Ames on October 12. Lytton was co-host of the convention and was in charge of the recreation over the noon hour. Dancing to the music of Roger Volker and his Hammond organ was enjoyed. Bob Bartels was in charge of the final business session and was master of ceremonies for the reception program in the morning.

The student council held an assembly program on the state convention. Each member prepared a three to five minute speech on a specific submect. This was done in order to inform the students about the convention and to help them understand more about the council's activities.

Valentine Formal

On the evening of February 13, the gym was brightly decorated with red and white streamers, hearts and cupids. A heart-shaped false ceiling was made of chicken wire stuffed with red and white napkins. Lounges were made along the west wall by hanging red and white crepe paper streamers to partition them from the rest of the floor. The King and Queen of Hearts and their attendants' chairs adorned the east wall. All the decorating was done by the F.H.A. club members.

Many girls with corsages and a bright array of different colored formals appeared for the festivities with their dates, boys sporting buttonaires in their suit lapels. Roger Volker with his organ and his assistant provided the music for the dancing.

Music

Fifty-eight high school students participated in music activities in the school year of 1953-1954.

The marching band, which consisted of thirty-five members, marched at all of the home football games, and had a special performance at homecoming. On October third the band members attended Band Night at Sioux City, where they had the thrilling experience of marching in a mass band in which thirty-six schools were represented. On October 17, the band participated in the marching band contest at Sac City.

Several band members and a mixed vocal quartet went to Spencer on October 17 for all-state band and chorus tryouts. The mixed quartet, which consisted of Eleanor Waggett, Gloria Denise, Keith Kreft, and Bob Bartels was chosen to sing in the all-state chorus took part in the the Calhoun County Festival at Farnhamville on January 27. After performing there in the mass concert band and chorus, the members put on a mid-winter musical at home on January 31.

The band, along with a few ensembles, also played at the Lytton Creamery meeting on February 20; and both small instrumental and vocal groups performed at the Women's Club meeting on April eighth.

The solo and ensemble preliminary contest was held April ninth and tenth at Rockwell City. There were twenty entries in the contest, including the brass quintet, sax quartet, trumpet trio, clairnet trio, girl's sextet, trio, and quartet, boy's quartet, piano solos by Erma Dee Landsness, Gloria Denise, and Karen Landsness, vocal solos by Ro-Dean Denise, Jovonna Lott, and Eleanor Waggett, clairnet solo by Ro-Dean Denise, trumpet solo by Rhonda Demein, Frenchhorn solo by Karen Landsness, and trombone solo by Erma Dee Landsness. Of these, four entries were given I ratings and fourteen were given II ratings. The entries which received I ratings were: trumpet solo by Rhonda Demein, piano solos by Karen Landsness and Gloria Denise and brass quintet, which consisted of Erma Dee Landsness, Verne Hillmer, Karen Landsness, Keith Kreft, and Gloria Denise.

Those who received I ratings at the preliminary contest entered in the music contest on April 29-30. All of these contestants received a II rating.

On May 4, a spring musical was held; and on May 7-8 the large groups performed for the last time this school year at the music contest at Newell. Here the band received a I rating and each of the chorus groups received a II rating.
